Philippine Tariff.

By its ruling against the Government in the case of Emil J. Pepke vs. the United States, holding that the Philippine Islands became American territory upon the exchanging of the peace treaty with Spain, the Federal Court emphasizes the necessity for an early and definite settlement of the Philippine problem.

In the case of Porto Rico, acting under the compelling influence of the Sugar Trust, an American Congress imposed on the people of a country which was already a part of this country a tariff tax from which other sections of the United States were free.

The time now seems to have gone by for the game of dealing with the insular possessions as foreign territory or as domestic territory according to the convenience of the moment from the viewpoint of the interested trusts. According to the Supreme Court, the Philippines, ceasing to be Spanish territory, "instantly became American territory." As such, they cannot rightfully be subjected to a tariff discrimination not suffered by other sections of the Union. As an American possession, they are under the protection of the American Constitution. That is common decency if it is not final law.

Under the conditions now developed, the action of Congress in the matter of Philippine legislation in the near future will be studied with intelligent interest by the American people. There is a strong trust opposition to "free trade" with the Philippines. Yet, if the Philippines are held as at present there can be no moral right to tax Philippine exports to this country. Just how the will of the trusts is to be carried out in this matter—the Philippines retained as domestic territory and yet taxed as foreign territory—is difficult to comprehend. The Fifty-seventh Congress, however, will doubtless do its best to solve the problem to the satisfaction of the trusts.—St. Louis Republic.

Gov. Leslie Praises Beckham.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 28.—Among the hundreds of letters received at the State Executive Department within the last week congratulating Gov. Beckham on the masterful way in which he exposed Gov. Durbin, of Indiana, in the matter of requisitions for the fugitives Taylor and Finley, are two former Chief Executives of Kentucky, Gov. Preston H. Leslie, now of Montana, and Gov. J. Proctor Knott, of Danville.

Both congratulate Gov. Beckham in the warmest possible terms upon his handling of Gov. Durbin and speak of Gov. Beckham's letter as a State paper that will be placed high up among the records of the Kentucky Executive Department. The letter of former Gov. Leslie reads: Helena, Mont., Nov. 23.—To J. C. W.

Beckham, Governor of Kentucky—Dear Sir: There will be left on record, and high upon the pages of Kentucky history, a great many gems of honor to the State and her people, and many of them connected with your name and official career. Chief amongst them will be your letter to the man who is, at present and has been for months acting as Governor of Indiana. It is, indeed, a gem, and will sparkle as a star of light, manhood and true patriotism as long as Christian civilization and the love of truth shall dominate the race of man under the skies of the American country. I wish it was upon parchment and hung in every home throughout the State.

I thank you most sincerely for its gift to your confident constituency and to the lovers of justice and truth all over this country of States and Territories, so admirably interlocked with each other for the common good and protection of all.

Very truly your friend,
PRESTON H. LESLIE.

The Old Way of Voting.

There is a great demand throughout Kentucky for a return to the old viva voce manner of voting and the abolishment of the secret ballot. The matter of submitting an amendment to the Constitution to this effect is certain to come up before the Legislature this winter, and will doubtless receive great attention. If we remember correctly the Democratic party is committed to the change by a resolution adopted at a State Convention. We also understand that a great many Republicans favor the change.

The News was very warmly in favor of the adoption of the secret ballot upon the idea that it would prevent bribery and would be more satisfactory to the State. It has failed to accomplish this purpose. In fact under the ballot system there has never been an election held in the State in which there has not been more or less charge of corruption. Time and again it has been openly avowed that election of fliers have been bought and the returns falsified. Bribery goes on just the same with the voter and in addition to this there is frequently wholesale frauds committed by election officers.

For the very reasons we originally favored the secret ballot we now favor a change back to the old system. We believe the people of the State favor the change and with some of the restrictions now pertaining to the ballot system added to the old law, the elections will be much more satisfactory to the people. The Legislature will make no mistake in submitting the question to the people.—Elizabethtown News.

Mr. W. H. Read, of Scottsville, has announced himself a candidate for Doorkeeper of the next General Assembly.

Dr. Coyle's Theory.

Rev. Robert F. Coyle, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Denver, Col., holds that the present system of morning and evening services on Sunday has had its day of usefulness, and that a social meeting at the church on Sunday night, with a large Bible class in the afternoon and the regular morning service should be substituted. He gives as his reasons for his belief that a change is necessary, that no man has brains enough to prepare two sermons a week, and ought not to be expected to, and that people are already sufficiently instructed as to their duty. Mr. Coyle does not hold that the need for the Gospel is less than it was, but that men already know more than they are willing to carry out, and for that reason will not come to church to be told what to do and what to leave undone, unless the services can be made attractive.

His program for Sunday is for the regular service and sermon in the morning; a large Bible class, with paid teachers, if necessary, in the afternoon, and, in the evening, a gathering in which the social element can come to the front. It is not, he says, his desire to secularize Sunday, but that the church should conform to the spirit of the times.
